Group becomes focus for desperate families in UK following devastating Haiti earthquake

By Lucy Purdy

A GROUP from Seven Sisters has been thrust into the limelight following the devastation wreaked by the Haitian earthquake.

Phone calls from desperate relatives all over the UK have flooded into United Haitians In The UK since the quake hit the impoverished Caribbean nation last Tuesday.

Up to 200,000 people are feared to have perished in the disaster but because phones and electricity lines are down, many friends and families in the UK have been unable to contact loved ones.

From a small building in Netherton Road, 33-year-old group co-chairwoman Carole Attis has been surviving on just two hours' sleep each night and dedicating the rest of her time to helping her fellow countrymen.

Not only is she trying to put people in touch with their families but has also set up a donation drive for people to give blankets, sleeping bags, clothes, tents – anything that may be of use on the chaotic streets of Haiti.

She said: "For days I was frantic, not knowing if my parents were OK, but I finally got an email from my uncle just saying 'good news' – and he was only able to send that because he has a generator.

"At the beginning it was hard even to believe what was happening. I couldn't believe what we were seeing on TV.

"I spoke to my mum and dad at more length yesterday from where they are, just outside Port-au-Prince in a place called Fonds-des-Nègres.

"Mum was saying people are turning back to the countryside because of how bad things are in the city. Their house is completely devastated, flattened, but they are saying that is not a priority now. They are shaken, but my parents are strong."

Campaigners ready for meeting with health boss planning A&E cut

By Lucy Purdy

A MEETING to discuss "indefensible" threats to the Whittington Hospital's A&E department will take place in Archway on Monday.

Members of the Defend The Whittington Hospital Coalition are urging as many people as possible to attend the public meeting at Archway Methodist Church Hall, in Archway Close, at 7pm.

Campaigners have vowed to fight sweeping cuts to health services in Haringey after proposals emerged for the Highgate Hill hospital's 24-hour A&E department to be scrapped.

Haringey currently has no major hospitals within its border and critics warn the proposal could put lives at risk.

Rachel Tyndall, chief executive of the North Central London division of the NHS, will answer questions at the meeting to which anyone concerned about health services in north London is welcome to attend.

A spokesman for the Defend The Whittington Hospital Coalition said: "Aging the A&E would mean incredibly difficult journeys either to a hospital in the centre of London or to the Royal Free in Hampstead - a hospital that's quite a distance from any major Tube or bus route and is surrounded by congested roads for most of the day. Losing the Whittington's A&E would be tantamount to a death sentence for some and create a hellish journey for most others.

"We urge all sections of the community - the elderly, families, individuals, students, schools, places of worship, businesses and community groups, everyone who uses or is a potential user of A&E services - to join our non-political, independent campaign to save the Whittington's A&E."

Another meeting of the coalition will take place at 7pm tomorrow at the Whittington Community Centre, in Yerbury Road, to discuss further campaign plans. A mass march is planned for February so health chiefs cannot ignore the strength of feeling about the plans.

Visit the coalition's website at www.dwhc.wordpress.com/about/ or email defendwhittington@gmail.com

In the spotlight: Rachel Tyndall will answer questions on Monday

Labour man's defection over to Lib Dems

A SENIOR Labour councillor in Haringey has defected to the Liberal Democrats, saying the council has failed to lift the borough out of a "mess".

St Ann's ward councillor Brian Haley announced his resignation from the Labour Party in advance of Monday's council meeting.

Mr Haley is currently cabinet member for environment and conservation and has been a Labour representative for 16 years.

The move increases the Lib Dems' seats in Tottenham - a key battleground in May's elections for control of Haringey Council.

He said: "Over the past few months it has become clearer that Labour has no vision of how to lift Haringey out of its mess. For this reason I've taken the difficult decision to leave Labour and join the only party that has the ideas and ability to turn things around."

Councillor Haley founded the African-Caribbean Achievement Awards 12 years ago which celebrate young people's educational achievements. He also sits on the board for the African Caribbean Leadership Council and is a member of the North London Waste Authority.

The news comes as a second blow to the Labour Group after the defection of Noel Park ward councillor Alan Dobbie to the Conservatives in July last year.

'You feel like crying and crying but that won't change anything – we need to act'

Carole still has not heard from other friends living in the Haitian capital Port-au-Prince and said homeless people now living amid the rubble in scorching temperatures were getting increasingly desperate.

"What do these people need most? They need everything," she said.

"They need water, food and medical supplies. People I have spoken to in Port-au-Prince have said people are dying from their injuries, literally bleeding to death on the streets because the hospitals are full. They are facing starvation. We told them the aid is there but they haven't seen it filter through yet. It's unbelievable."

Thankfully, Carole's parents, mother Glodette and father Erilus, both in their sixties, are in a better situation than some as there is clean drinking water in Fonds-de-Nègres. After informing her own relatives, scattered across the globe in the USA, Canada and France, that her family was safe, Carole turned her efforts to working around the clock to help others.

"We've become an information centre," she said.

"We're getting calls and emails from Haitians all over the UK. They're wondering if we have news for certain areas, about their parents, brothers and sisters. Some we know more about than others. We try to reassure them as much as we can but, in fact, we don't know a lot of the time. We only launched the group last year but we're trying to help as best we can.

"I have to get out there. I can't just sit here and do nothing."

Carole and her colleagues at United Haitians In The UK have set up two distribution centres; one is the Chestnut Community Centre in St Ann's Road, Tottenham, and another in south London, where people can drop off shoes, candles, water purifying tablets and medical supplies between 9am and 9pm, Monday to Sunday.

Carole hopes to fly to Haiti as soon as possible to help out on the ground – last time she was there was for two weeks in February when the country was thriving during carnival time.

Before the disaster: Carole Attis' parents escaped death in Port-au-Prince

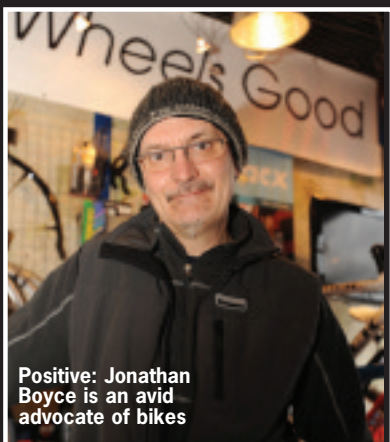

"I have to get out there," she said. "I can't just sit here and do nothing."

"Haiti is a very poor country but the people are very friendly. There is poverty but such a strong human feeling too. I believe if we can restore that we can restore the country. Haiti may have crumbled but it will still exist because of the human spirit."

Positive: Jonathan Boyce is an avid advocate of bikes

Grant gears Haringey up to become biking borough

HARINGEY is set to become a haven for cyclists after it was named by London Mayor Boris Johnson as one of London's new "biking boroughs".

Twelve boroughs on the capital's outskirts will each receive £25,000 from Transport for London to fund a study into how people can be encouraged to harness pedal power. The Biking Boroughs scheme is part of London's Year of Cycling, which includes the launch of London's Cycle Hire scheme and the first two Cycle Superhighways.

Based on the results of the survey, Haringey Council will then work with schools, health services and businesses to promote cycling, taking measures such as creating more bike parking spaces or improving the safety of junction layouts.

The news was welcomed by Jonathan Boyce, owner of the Two Wheels Good bike shop, in Crouch Hill, Crouch End.

He said: "Anything that gets people on their bikes is a good thing."

"People don't realise cycling is often much quicker than getting the train. I can cycle from Crouch End to Wood Green in about seven minutes whereas it would take at least 15 to drive, once you get through the traffic and park up."

"And then you've got the running costs of driving and the environmental benefits of cycling. London's actually quite a small city, which you don't get from looking at the Tube map, so cycling is a great option. If you cycle to work you arrive feeling awake and ready to work!"

Mr Boyce suggested the fear of bicycle theft deters a lot of people so suggested part of the cash goes toward building secure bike stores around the borough.

Councillor Brian Haley, council cabinet member for environment and conservation, said: "This is very good news."

"Haringey is working to reduce car use in the borough and we welcome this opportunity to explore increasing the use of bicycles by residents and further enhance our green credentials."

Though neighbouring Barnet and Enfield missed out on cash, Barking and Dagenham, Bexley, Brent, Bromley, Croydon, Ealing, Havering, Hillingdon, Kingston, Merton and Redbridge were also named as biking boroughs this week.

Fireman jailed over illegal passports

A FIREMAN from Tottenham who helped illegal immigrants to get passports in the names of dead children has been jailed for 15 months.

Paul Williams, of West Green Road, verified applications for people who did not have permission to live in the UK. The 43-year-old, who worked for London Fire Brigade for 23 years, had earlier pleaded guilty to conspiracy to obtain UK passports.

By abusing his position of trust, Williams countersigned for 81 UK passport forms made in the identity of dead children between 2001 and 2009. He denied receiving money for his actions and admitted knowing little about the applicants. He was arrested at Euston fire station on July 28 last year, while letters and computer equipment were seized from his home.

Detective Constable Craig Hutchinson said: "Williams played a central role in allowing individuals into the UK. He has a blatant disregard for the security of his community and it is therefore only right that he should face justice."

By the time Williams was arrested, the investigation had confirmed a total of 59 passport applications countersigned by him were fraudulent. Williams had also signed a number of driving licence applications.

A total of 21 of the forms fraudulently signed by Williams led to passports being granted. He also signed 18 genuine forms with 16 passports issued as a result.

Some people had tried to gain passports in multiple identities, the investigation by the Met Police, UK Border Agency, Identity and Passport Service and DVLA found.

Squatters move in to family home while it is renovated, sparking a costly and painful battle...

By Lucy Purdy

'It's shocking, especially for the children. We have had problems sleeping since this'

A YOUNG family from Tottenham is facing thousands of pounds of legal bills after a family of Romanian squatters camped out in their newly refurbished home and left them to pick up the tab.

Julian and Samantha Mosedale have already had to stump up £3,000 for the cost of repairing their damaged home, after three families moved into the mid-terrace property in St Margaret's Road over Christmas. The Mosedales were on holiday with their three young sons when they received a call from a concerned friend who had seen a steady stream of people carrying furniture going in and out of the house.

The staggered couple have been left to pick up the pieces after the squatters were finally evicted last Tuesday and are now even contemplating leaving Tottenham for good.

Police had initially told the Mosedales they were unable to help as the squatters showed them a fake tenancy agreement and insisted they had paid rent to a "big black man" they met in a nearby McDonald's.

Mrs Mosedale, 41, a catalogue manager, told the Advertiser: "It is really frustrating the law doesn't give property owners rights and that we can be locked out of our own house. It's just unbelievable.

"Through a translator we told the women we weren't trying to be cruel to them but that this was our family home and we needed it back.

"They told police they'd been the victim of crime and had paid to stay there, so we don't know their real circumstances. Clearly there is organised crime and gangs somewhere in this."

THE Mosedales moved out of the property in July 2008 while building work was being carried out and planned to stay in their rented house near Alexandra Palace until March when the work was scheduled to finish.

But when they rushed back from holiday on January 3, they realised up to a dozen people, including several young children, had moved in and seemed set to stay for a while. The squatters lugged in mattresses and TVs, were using a grimy cooker on the floor of the kitchen and even put up curtain rails which were left behind alongside piles of rubbish dumped in the garden.

Clothes belonging to ten-year-old Jake, Toby, eight, and five-year-old Finn were taken, along with some tools and even doorknobs and police are now looking into the couple's claim of criminal damage after the front window was damaged. One of the women even asked Mr Mosedale for £2,000 in "compensation" before she finally left the home last week. They are thought to have run up hundreds of pounds in bills by using electric heaters because the partially renovated house had not yet had radiators or hot water installed. The Mosedale family have to return to court tomorrow to get full possession of the house – they only have interim possession – and the event has shaken their faith in the area.

Gesturing to a pile of dirty nappies and rotting pitta breads in her garden, Mrs Mosedale said: "At the moment we just don't feel safe.

"It's just a shocking thing to happen, especially with the children. They definitely picked up on what was happening, especially Jake. We've had problems sleeping and eating since this – there was a constant sick feeling. It seemed no one we spoke to wanted to help us, we felt lost and alone.

"Now we have the court order, hopefully we can move on."

Mr Mosedale, 46, an illustrator, added: "I don't think we will move in here now though. We just don't feel safe in Tottenham any more."

The family will remain in their rented house in Alexandra Park until they sort things out with their property.

Though squatting is a civil matter, a spokeswoman for Haringey police confirmed they were investigating a report of false representation in relation to a fraudulent tenancy agreement as well as the criminal damage allegation. news.haringey@nlhnews.co.uk

Gang hits shop in an en masse shoplifting raid

By Lucy Purdy

A SPORTS store in Tottenham Hale was repeatedly targeted by groups of young men shoplifting "en masse" in the run-up to Christmas.

A persistent group of between ten and 15 youths targeted JD Sports in the Tottenham Hale Retail Park, setting off fireworks near the front door and then rushing in and grabbing handfuls of clothes. Police say the youths were searching for a particular kind of Nike jacket which they may have been planning to sell on. This kind of distraction crime, known as "steaming", can be terrifying for staff and costly for companies, with hundreds of pounds worth of goods disappearing from store shelves in a matter of seconds.

Sergeant Lee Hobbs, of the Tottenham Green Safer Neighbourhood team, told the Advertiser: "They were effectively shoplifting en masse – setting fireworks off at the front door, rushing in, snatching stuff and rushing out. The problem seems to have been resolved now with the help of security staff and Haringey Priority Intervention team, including plain clothes officers."

He said some of the gang had looked very young and were known to be from the N17 area of Tottenham. Sgt Hobbs said he had not seen this type of tactic in Haringey before but was aware of it at larger stores in the West End.

The revelation comes as retailers report a sharp surge in the number of shoplifting attacks since the recession. The latest survey by the British Retail Consortium shows thefts by customers soared by a third between 2008 and 2009. There is now a shoplifting crime or attack on a staff member every minute in the UK.

"The actual figure is probably much higher as a good deal of abuse goes unreported," added Stephen Robertson, BRC director general. "The increase in retail crime during the recession can't be justified as a move from greed to need. Whatever the motivation, shoplifting is never victimless or acceptable."

A spokesman for JD Sports declined to comment on the thefts.

Jail tale with punch

A Prophet (18)

Dir: Jacques Audiard

Starring: Tahar Rahim, Niels Arestrup, Adel Bencherif

IT PLAYS out like a French Godfather or Goodfellas but with two important differences.

One: most of the movie is set in jail. Secondly: the anti-hero is an Arab.

Nineteen-year-old Malik is incarcerated for six years for reasons never specified. With mixed parentage the vulnerable loner fails to fit into either the 20-strong Corsican gang or the Arab contingent, making him an ideal pawn for the revered Corsican leader who forces him to befriend one troublesome Arab and slit his throat in grisly fashion.

Receiving instant protection, the ambitious Malik soon graduates from skivvy work to running important errands for the Corsicans while – like Goodfellas' Henry Hill – starting a nice little sideline for himself in a drugs racket.

But the dead Arab continues to haunt his cell and the ghost's gradual decomposition is reminiscent of the painting in Dorian Gray's attic which horribly transforms as the hero commits himself to the dark.

Running at two-and-a-half hours, this is thrilling, visceral and utterly engrossing cinema of the highest order which packs a massive punch to the solar plexus. Never stinting in its depiction of stomach-churning violence, the winner of last year's Cannes Grand Prix is also a stylish, almost poetic meditation on the capricious nature of life which has dealt Malik a far more powerful hand inside jail than he would surely have received outside.

With his mixed background and protean nature, Malik is very much the modern hero, and his talismanic survival instincts, along with his mystical visions, go some way to explaining the film's title, adding yet another dimension to the generic prison drama which has already morphed into a tense thriller.

So praise to Jacques Audiard for yet another audacious enterprise following his fascinating The Beat That My Heart Skipped, and praise to the unknown Tahar Rahim for his chameleon-like performance in which he always seems to be one step ahead of us ever really reading him and discovering what makes this charming killer tick.

The Red Shoes (U)

Re-release of this fantastic, expressionist dream – one of the triumphs from the Powell and Pressburger post-war powerhouse. To call it a movie about dance does it disservice as obsession, madness, love and the limits of artistic creativity are explored in glorious technicolour style.

The Road (15)

It didn't take long for the first great film of the new decade to emerge. Cormac McCarthy's post-apocalyptic novel of one man's survival with his son is carefully transferred to the big screen in a picture of terrible, visceral beauty that demands to be seen.

Nine (12A)

Daniel Day Lewis and A-List beauties capture the style – not substance – of a 1960s Fellini film as a director tries to overcome writers' block. Chicago director Rob Marshall attempts to dazzle but there's a lack of decent songs.

Nowhere Boy (15)

Competent biopic of the teenage life of a certain John Lennon as he is pulled between the two major women in his life and forms a band called The Quarrymen. Too conventional to be a classic.

ANNE-MARIE SANDERSON

The Gannets

Bengal Paradise, 3 Great North Road, Brookmans Park, Potters Bar. 01707 651 444.

TEMPTING as it is to hibernate in the toasty nest, we gannets know the best way to shake off the winter blues is with a good curry.

So Gobbling Gannet and I scraped the frost off our wings and flew the short haul south to Bengal Paradise – formerly the Villa Rosa – perched on the edge of Potters Bar, hunting for a feast that wouldn't break the bank.

The funky mirrored water feature out front looked at risk of freezing into a spiky ice sculpture in the sub-zero conditions. But inside the welcome was hotter than a Madras chilli as the smiling proprietor brought us cold beers and crunchy nibbles.

We roosted in the cosy scalloped alcove seats and admired the snowcapped fields of Narnia outside. Inside, mooted purple lighting lent a regal feel to our comfortable surroundings and several impressive reviews adorned the shelves.

Bengal Paradise's chefs offer a refreshing mix of old favourites and exotic choices (Tilapia johl or Darjeeling dome anyone?) to satisfy all levels of adventure.

Eager to get some fish in our gullets, we promptly ordered a platter of prawn and squid bhaja (£5.25) which were perfectly spiced and light, and garlic mushroom puree (£3.75) – spicy morsels served on delicious fried bread which resembled a dish from a fantasy breakfast.

Next, craving hearty, meaty grub, I chose Bengal supreme (£8.95), the ideal choice for a diner as indecisive as myself, comprising chicken stuffed with minced lamb, garlic, ginger and royal cumin, served in a medium (or choice of mild) curry sauce which was fantastically savoury and rich. Gobbling Gannet picked zinga king prawn (£12.95) which sizzled with barbecue flavour and arrived in such generous portions along with heavenly coconut-scented peshawari naan (£2.50) that we were soon cheered right up.

Paradise is hard to find at this time of year, but we reckon this place is a pretty good start.

Open noon–2.30pm and 6–11.30pm daily with buffet lunch on Sundays noon–3pm.

Varied model exhibition steaming in to Ally Pally

A smaller world

ONE of the great British hobbies steams into Alexandra Palace this weekend.

For three days, people of all ages can enjoy an insight into model engineering – teaching the young new skills and keeping the minds of older folk active.

Locomotives, flying models and a lot of steam will fill the Great Hall in a celebration of every type of modelling from the traditional steam engines and boats through to the more modern remote control models of planes, helicopters and tanks.

More than 1,000 models will be on display while more than 40 clubs will be exhibiting from all over London in the perfect introduction to this quintessential British hobby.

"It is an opportunity for children to get involved and learn basic modelling and engineering skills which will spark the interest for a future hobby and often career," said organiser Avril Spence.

"While parents and grandparents, who may have built trains in their youth, can take up the hobby again. We want to ensure the fascination for this hobby is kept alive for future generations."

The event is especially good for kids who can enjoy exciting demonstrations from The British Model Flying Association, The UK Rocketry Association and The Imagineering Foundation - offering lots of hands on activities.

● The London Model Engineering Exhibition 2010 runs from this Friday to Sunday. Tickets range from £9.50 to £22.50 for a family ticket. The exhibition runs from 10am to 5pm, apart from Sunday, 10am to 4pm. For more details call the box office on 01926 614 101.

Out and about

● A MUSICAL melting pot of jazz, cabaret, Gypsy swing, jive, bluegrass and Balkan traditional will blow through Downstairs at the King's Head in Crouch End this Friday night. Ta Mere is the eclectic band blending violin, bass, guitar, bagpipes, harmonica and drums together in what promises to be a spirited evening of entertainment. Doors open at 8.30pm, prices to be announced. Call box office on 020 8340 1028.

● MAKE and play on Sundays in Tottenham. Bruce Castle Museum in Lordship Lane is back for another season of arts and crafts activities for kids running from 2pm to 4pm. Jumping Jack is the name of the next session this Sunday, followed by Peg People next Saturday and an interesting series of Egypt-themed events in February. Admission free. Call the museum on 020 8808 8772.

● THE era of elegance returns to the Millfield Arts Centre next Thursday as Tony Jacobs sings his way through The Gershwin Years. George Gershwin, Cole Porter, Irving Berlin and Jerome Kern are some of the many composers celebrated in this nostalgic tribute from 8pm. Tickets £16 (£14 concs) and for more details call the box office on 020 8807 6680.

Kranjcar targets Anfield victory

Eyes on the Prize: Kranjcar is in a confident mood ahead of Spurs' trip to Liverpool

By Lee Husson

NIKO KRANJCAR has backed Tottenham to put some daylight between themselves and Liverpool in the race for the all-important fourth place finish when the two sides meet at Anfield tonight.

Spurs currently lie in the final Champions League spot, four points ahead of Rafa Benitez's side who have struggled for form all season and are way down in seventh.

Harry Redknapp's men were thwarted from extending their lead over their top-four rivals by a stunning performance by Hull City keeper Boaz Myhill on Saturday as they were forced to settle for a 0-0 draw with the relegation strugglers, but Kranjcar – in-red hot form after his move from Portsmouth at the start of the campaign – believes Spurs have what it takes to pick up maximum points from this evening's intriguing Premier League clash.

"We want fourth place. We've said that from day one," the Croatian star said.

"It's a good time to play Liverpool, but still they are a massive team and we are going away from home.

"We believe we can win the game. We have already beaten them once this season but they are only four points behind us.

"It's going to be a massive game for us. It's important to put some breathing space between us and them."

Redknapp was left frustrated after the weekend saw his side drop more points at home, but the boss was quick to recognise the contribution by Myhill, who made a string of incredible saves, especially two superb double-stops to deny Robbie Keane.

"What can you do?" he asked. "The keeper has had an unbelievable day and will never play like that again in his life.

"They were miraculous saves, five or six incredible, world-class saves. We kept opening them up but we just couldn't beat the keeper. He kept getting in the way of the bleeding ball."

Accused: The Spurs manager will stand trial

Redknapp charged over tax evasion allegations

HARRY REDKNAPP will appear before magistrates next month after being charged with two counts of tax evasion.

The former Portsmouth manager is accused of cheating the public revenue out of £40,000 following a lengthy police investigation into alleged corruption in football.

Spurs boss Redknapp voluntarily attended Bishopsgate police station on Friday last week where he was charged.

A Crown Prosecution Service statement said: "The CPS Revenue and Customs Division decided there was sufficient evidence and it was in the public interest to charge Mr Redknapp.

"He is jointly charged with Milan Mandaric, the former chairman of Portsmouth City Football Club, following an investigation by the City of London Police and HM Revenue & Customs."

The charges concern two payments totalling $295,000 (£183,000), from Mandaric to Redknapp via a Monaco bank account, evading the tax and national insurance contributions due between April 1 2002 and November 28 2007.

Redknapp will appear at the City of Westminster Magistrates' Court on February 11.

New-look Skolars are ready for big kick-off

THE LONDON SKOLARS face their first match of the new rugby league season on Friday when they take on Harlequins in the Capital Challenge.

The clash, which gets under way at 1.45pm at the Honourable Artillery Company in Old Street, will see head coach James Massara taking charge of the team for the first time.

He said: "We have some exciting new players coming into the club, and I am looking forward to seeing them in action against high quality opposition.

"Players like back rower Ollie Purslow and hooker Liam Prescott have been at the Quins for many years, and so going up against their old club will be a big occasion for them.

"I am also keen to see what some of the young London lads can do. We have a good number of players who have come up through the junior system and have been on the Rugby Football League Pathways."

The match could see Curtis Cunningham make his debut after the former Celtic Crusaders and Wales winger became the latest player to sign for the club.

Massara added: "I am glad that Curtis has decided to take on the challenge of coming to London and taking the Skolars on to new levels.

"He brings with him pace and power to burn and I am sure he will adapt to the environment we have down here."
